

The Daily Telegraph

Causing stir in custody

ROSS Whitehill, a former vice-president of Morgan Stanley, has been appointed partner of management consultants Thomas Murray, where he will be responsible for beefing up its European global custody business.

Not that the firm needs much help. It has recently been involved in the transfer of Prudential's custody business—the second largest transaction in the sector—and that of Barings'.

